

Our own perception of students' ability levels influences our expectations of them. The more we expect of our learners, the more opportunities we provide for teaching & learning. Those opportunities lead to higher levels of performance.

www.PrAACticalAAC.org

Our own perception of students' ability levels influences our expectations of them. The more we expect of our learners, the more opportunities we provide for teaching & learning. Those opportunities lead to higher levels of performance.

www.PrAACticalAAC.org

Our own perception of students' ability levels influences our expectations of them. The more we expect of our learners, the more opportunities we provide for teaching & learning. Those opportunities lead to higher levels of performance.

www.PrAACticalAAC.org